Yai Wanonabälewä: The Enemy God* Chosen for Brilliant Light International Film Festival

Brilliant Light International Film Festival selected Yai Wanonabälewä: The Enemy God as one of the films to be featured at their festival on April 2-6 in Hollywood California.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, March 10, 2008 --, Yai Wanonabälewä: The Enemy God was picked out of hundreds of films to show in a prime spot on Friday, April 4 at 7:30 pm at the Brilliant Light International Film Festival. The Friday night showing will be followed by a Q&A session with the filmmakers and by a party celebrating the festival. The film will also be shown on Sunday, April 6 at 2:40 pm.

Brilliant Light International Film Festival is in its second year. The festival is committed to exhibiting projects which expand consciousness, develop awareness, shift paradigms, challenge the mind, inspire the imagination, awaken the spirit, and illuminate the soul. The festival gives voice to independent filmmakers whose projects embody such intentions regardless of gender, race, geographic location, religion or sexual identity.

The festival takes place at Raleigh Studios Hollywood, 5300 Melrose Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90038. Their website is: www.brilliantlightfilmfestival.com where a complete schedule of films, venues and links to buy tickets online are located.

About Yai Wanonabälewä: The Enemy God

Shake is a powerful shaman of the Yanomamö people. He wields his power to heal and to protect his people against their enemies in this world and beyond. Tracing his life and the life of his community over 40 years of their history, Shake tells how he and his people grapple with new ideas that come from the outside world and the challenging decisions they make in order to maintain their identity and survive as a people.

A viewer who recently attended a sneak-preview of the film said "Your storytelling from the Yanomamö perspective, is very valuable and beautiful."

Yai Wanonabälewä: The Enemy God gives voice to a group of indigenous people to relate their own dramatic story. It is the result of a collaboration of storytellers and filmmakers from Venezuela, Belize, Canada, and the United States.
